

Sarah Dieleman Perry is the Director of Economic Opportunity, a program area that integrates individual and family wealth and asset building into community development so all Pittsburghers can thrive financially. In this role, she develops strategic partnerships, raises philanthropic and government funding, launches successful national programs, creates new initiatives and analyzes data to track outcomes. She facilitates the Asset Building Network, manages the Financial Opportunity Center and Financial Empowerment Center initiatives and supports Bank On Pittsburgh, Fund My Future and the Financial Counseling Cohort.

Sarah served Pittsburgh Partnership for Neighborhood Development as a program officer since 2001 prior to its transition to Neighborhood Allies. Prior to her role at PPND, Sarah worked as a project manager in the Housing Division of Allegheny County Department of Economic Development and as a community organizer at Oakland Planning & Development Corporation. She got her start in community development as a community liaison in Guatemala for World Renew, and as an AmeriCorps VISTA member in Michigan.

Sarah holds a Master's in Economic and Social Development and a Certificate in Nonprofit Management from the University of Pittsburgh's Graduate School of Public and International Affairs.
